Dear Manager, Product Classification,

I decided to take keyboard in hand(or something) and let you know how much I count on the mail as a disabled person at the tail-end of a pandemic.

Packages, whether from friends or just from shopping, mean a lot at times like that I am getting out a bit more, but even on the best day, it can be hard to linger in a store. Some of my friends get meds through the mail also.. Not only do I not support further service cuts, I eagerly await the day when the onerous requirement to pre-fund retirements is lifted, and the Postal Service could be restored to full greatness. People are counting on you!

Sincerely,

Erika Jahneke
